Q 6 Is the author actually talking about "triumph and disaster" or how a person responds to those situations? What is he conveying here?

Ans. The poet is actually not talking about any triumph and disaster, he means success and failure. We should always be ready to accept success and failure equally. Failure is the first step to get success. Without failure, our success is far away.

Q 7 Why does the author say "Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it"?

Ans. The poet tells the importance of time. Time is money. We should not waste a single second of our life. If we make the fullest and the best use of our time, our success is definite. Therefore, the poet says "Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it".

Q 8. What does "unforgiving minute" suggest?

Ans. "Unforgiving minute" suggest that we should keep an account of every second of life. We should not waste even a single second of our time. If we waste even a minute of our time it will not forgive us.
